Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Six years ago I had an attack of indigestion and liver complaint that lasted for weeks. I was unable to do any hard work, had no appetite, food distressed me, and I suffered much from headache. My skin was sallow, and sleep did not refresh me. I tried several remedies without obtaining any relief. Finally, one of my customers recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It helped me from the first—in fact, after taking six bottles I was completely cured, and could eat anything and sleep like a child."

CHINESE ATHLETES GETTING INTO SHAPE

NEXT TUESDAY THEIR FIELD MEET IS TO BE HELD AT THE BOYS' FIELD.

Next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Chinese Athletic Club will hold their annual field meet at the Boys' Field and a very good time is promised those who attend. The club has some splendid athletes and they will be out for blood as they have a goodly number of medals up for prizes.

A number of well known Chinese athletes as Mon Yin, Lo On, En Sue, John Lo and many others will compete.
En Sue has been working on the sprints for some time and he is in splendid condition. He will probably come close to getting a record.

The field is in fairly good condition considering the amount of rainfall which it has received. If it should not rain between now and Tuesday afternoon a very fair field should be in evidence on Tuesday.

The committee in charge of the meet are well engaged in drawing up their program. This will be submitted for ratification to the Chinese Athletic Club at an early date and then everything will be in readiness for the crack of the pistol.

TONIGHT THE PINS WILL FLY

NEW BOWLING ALLEYS AT THE HOTEL BATHS OPEN TONIGHT—ADMITTANCE BY INVITATION.

Tonight the Hotel Baths Bowling alleys will open and the bowlers will have a chance to take a crack at the 10 pins on A. No. 1 alleys, the finest that can be installed. The management has spared no expense to fit up alleys that will satisfy all. No one can blame the alleys or balls for his poor shots for the equipment is perfect.
Tonight there will be free bowling and all having invites will be allowed to play. The public will be admitted as spectators and a good large crowd is expected to be on hand to see the popular sport.

In connection with the baths where the players can have a swim after their game the sport is sure to catch on.
There are many good bowlers in Honolulu and they will welcome back the game.

The Hotel Baths will present a lively scene this evening with both the pool and alleys going.

RACES ARE POSTPONED.

Owing to the damage done the landing stage by the late storm the regular

ANOTHER LEPROSARIUM BIDDER

C. K. Al, of the City Mill Co., applied to Acting Collector R. C. Stackable yesterday for a set of the plans and specifications of the new leprosarium The bids as before noted, will be opened in Washington on March 4. The S.
S. Mongolia, to leave here for the Coast February 19, will take the last mail by which bids can go forward in time.

ELKS WILL BROWSE ON MAUI.

Arrangements are being completed by Henry Easton of R. O. P. E. 616, for the trip to Maui by a delegation of local Elks. About 50 will go. They will meet the herd on Maui and will browse with them for some days.

FINED FOR A FROLIC.

Kaluna was yesterday taxed $3 and costs by the district magistrate for rowing with Kakalina Kupela, a Kakaako lady. It appeared to be a gin go.

APPROVED ACCOUNTS.

Judge Lindsay approved the trusteeship accounts of E. P. Bishop yesterday, in the estate of James G. Hayseiden, deceased.

TIED IN SACK THROWN IN TANK

STARTLING FEAT WHICH WILL BE PERFORMED AT THE HOTEL BATHS SATURDAY.

The 1907 Aquatic Carnival between the Myrtle and Heanani Boat Clubs will be opened on next Saturday evening at the Hotel Baths and the very first number on the program will be a stunt that will cause the spectators to hold their breath and await the ending of the act with anxiety. Just think if you will of a human being alive and well being thrust into a sack weighted with bricks and iron and then having the sack securely tied over his head.
Imprisoned in this manner this being is pitched into ten feet of water and it is up to him to fight his way out of this sack or drown. Those who are so lucky as to see this feat will be treated to a sight that they will not soon forget.

This is only one of the many amusing features that will be presented on this opening night. The fancy diving competition is held between two men representing each club. These men will dive for points and the best possible exhibition will be given. Three judges will pass upon the merits of the competitors. Froeth will represent the Heanani in this event while Kopke and O'Brien will dive for the Myrtles.
This will be a very keen event.

The rules governing the fancy diving are as follows:
Competitions shall be judged and decisions awarded by three judges, who shall take into consideration, and award points on the following five stages of each dive:

1. Form assumed by the competitors at the start.
2. The form used in leaving the take off.
3. The form assumed in the drop, or from the time of take off until touching the water.
4. The manner of entering the water.
5. The smallness of splash after entering.

No more than one point may be awarded for any one of the five stages above mentioned.

Fractions of a point may be awarded by the judges as they deem fair.

Five points to be considered a perfect dive.

SOCKER TODAY.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Punahou campus the Oahu College boys go up against the Kams in the first soccer game of a series of three for the championship. Both teams are in splendid shape and there will be something doing at the game.

FUN AT THE BATHS.

The Hotel Baths will be the only source of amusement in Honolulu tonight and the big pavilion will present a lively scene.

With the huge pool and the new alleys going full blast there is going to be "something doing."

Women and Others

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way

With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day With a craven soul and fearful?

Oh, a trouble's a ton or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble's what you make it;
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts.

But only, how did you take it?
You're beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that

Come up with a smiling face.
It's nothing against you to fall down flat.

But to lie there, that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why, the higher you bounce.

Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts.

It's how did you fight, what then?
If you battled the best you could, if you played your part in the world of men.

Why, the critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce.

And whether he's slow or spry, It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts.

But only, how did you die?
—EDMUND VANCE COOK.

"The Squaw Man," the play by Julie Opp Faversham, which has proved such a success on the stage in the East, has been made into a novel by Edward Milton Royle and is now issued with many striking illustrations from characters in the play. The plot is old, but it has novel features, and the self-sacrifice of the hero, Jim Kerhill, lifts him above the level of the ordinary man. It is a frequent device of the novelist to have his hero take upon himself the responsibility of another's crime, because that other man is loved by the woman he adores; but in real life such conduct would be called quixotry. Such sacrifice lifts us to the ranks of a hero the chief character in this book, who, after seeing Diana Majoribanks married to his cousin, the young Earl of Kerhill, comes to this country and buries himself on a Western cattle ranch. All except a few intimate friends believe he embezzled the funds of a military company, which the Earl himself had appropriated. The bitterness of expatri-ation and the fact that a young Indian girl saves his life leads him to marry her. Then comes fate again, and brings with it the death of his cousin and his own succession to the title and part of the estates. But the Indian wife stands between him and his happiness, and he is too much of a man to discard the savage woman. Complications that she thinks mean death induce the Indian wife to take her life, and the story closes with a prospect of sunny days for the man who has given the best years of his life to expiate another's fault.

The story moves with much dramatic force, and though theatrical in all its suggestions, the great scenes are simple, natural and convincing. The hero is not overdrawn, the cowboys are as good as the cattlemen in "The Virginian" and the Indian woman is a real transcript from life, as is her old father, the Chief Tabywana, who retains the haughty manner of his old days, but whom fire water makes as putty in the hands of the unscrupulous cattlemen. The story may be commended as very readable and as a true picture of certain phases of life among cattlemen of the Western plains.

The rain was coming down, but it failed to dampen the curiosity of two merry-voiced women who were standing before a store window debating the uses of a certain piece of silverware, with an abandon that implied lifelong intimacy, though it was also evident that they had never met before.

To be quite exact, it was an uncertain piece of silverware. It looked as if its designer had started out to make an oyster tureen, then got convivial and changed it into a punch bowl, then took a prohibition turn and put on a lid. The lid was a net of gilt wire with meshes the size of an orthodox caramel.

"What do you suppose it's intended for?" asked the woman in the trim rain wrap.

The woman in the bob-tail jacket shook her head.

"I was just wondering—wait, here comes a friend of mine who knows everything."

It was just as well to advertise the third woman's perfection, for she didn't look the part.

"Come here, Ann, and tell us what this thing is for," called the bob-tail woman.

Ann came, and with a glance at the silver answered with the promptness of one who knows everything.

"Why, that's an English crumplet basket. The net is to keep the napkins from touching the crumplet."

"Are you sure?" interrupted the Jacket woman, with a dubious look that failed to dovetail with the reputation she had just conferred.

"Sure. Still, I'll go inside and ask if you like."

When the woman who knew everything came out of the store the one who had apotheosized her asked anxiously:

"Was it an English crumplet basket?"

"Certainly not. It is a centerpiece for a dinner table. You put long-stemmed roses through the meshes and each guest gets one for a souvenir. When the lid's off you can use it for a salad dish, or a punch bowl or a soup tur-reen—

"Or a crumplet basket—if you want everything."

At a beautiful ball lately in San Francisco five favor figures were danced in the cotillion, the description of which is interesting. In the first, the cherry figure, a young lady gowned as the picturesque cherry girl in the famous old English print, entered, rolling a two-wheeled cart, laden with fascinating little hats fashioned of crepe paper and covered with luscious cherries for the maids and smart boutonnieres of cherries and tinsel for the men.

This figure, a marching one, was danced under wreaths of cherries and tinsel held by the men. The second figure was no less attractive, a fetching "Folly," assisted by a "Pierrot," distributed the favors, Parisian fans were given to the fair dancers, while the men received silver pencil holders tied with gay ribbon.

A stately marquise with powder and patches was intrusted with the favors for the third figure, Watteau bags in all colors of brocade silk for the girls and tapestry match boxes for their partners.

The favors for the fourth figure were the most unique of all. Two young girls garbed as peasants were the bearers of these, the girls receiving bird cages, each holding a live canary, and danced the figure with the pretty captive hung by colored ribbons to their waists. The men received long wands, ribbon bedecked, which they carried over their shoulders.

The sensation of the evening, however, was the final figure. A huge pink rose was wheeled into the ballroom, and, upon opening, disclosed another of the dancers as a charming butterfly, who distributed tissue tulips some three feet high, in the center of which were electric lights. The lights in the ballroom were darkened when this figure was danced, and nothing more beautiful could be imagined than the effect of the graceful flower bearers with their electric-lighted posies. The men's favors were hats of vari-colored crepe paper.

Round dancing and supper terminated the affair.

*****

A Chicago cotillion lately was another example of originality. The ballroom was decorated in Italian style with thousands of electric lights and poinsettia blossoms, and the feature of nearly every dance figure was a display of a myriad of tiny electric lights. The first figure, which was called "Fairland," was particularly brilliant in its electrical effects. In the next figure the room was darkened and electric umbrellas were used. In the "Rain" figure there was thunder and lightning, and real rain descended upon Mackintosh dancers. There was a "Railroad" figure, in which the men carried brass lanterns and the women bought tickets with which to find their partners in a real station.

There also was a "Weber and Field" figure, with three little pickaninnies dressed as bride, groom and Cupid, who came in to the arms of "Lohengrin," and as the Mendelssohn recessional died away danced a "breakdown" to the accompaniment of a Weber and Field medley. In addition there was a "Russian Driving" figure in the dark, with yokes ablaze with electric flowers; a "Swing" figure, in which swings were let down from the ceiling, and a "Mistress Mary" figure, in which the women were concealed behind flowers in a garden where the flowers turned out to be flower hats for the women. Besides the flower hats there were flower fans as favors, English primroses in baskets trimmed with big bows, real live tortoise shell kittens and English bull terrier pups.
Favors for the men were English officers' hats, walking sticks, monocles and orders of the Golden Fleece, Iron Cross and other gaudy trinkets.
